Dr. Tapan K. Panda

India has recently adopted new accounting standards, known as Indian Accounting Standards or Ind AS, that are substantially converged with IFRS Standards. This requires not only existing accountants to reskill themselves, but all newly qualified accountants to be trained on these new requirements. The adoption of this global reporting language will also provide huge scope of growth for people who develop skills around these international standards, especially for those who are beginning their career in finance and accounts. To address the need of qualified accountants in the industry KPMG in India under the aegis of the KPMG Learning Academy offers "KPMG Course for Accounting Professionals" designed to prepare students for a career in accountancy. In addition to providing training, KPMG will also provide the students access to its LMS (Learning Management System) support covering: session videos and presentations, and features like 'Ask An Expert' and assessments.

"I am hopeful that this course will help in building a brigade of professionals who are equipped to provides F&A services globally"

My experience with O.P Jindal Global University over the last month has been a rush of emotions. From the first day I experienced the plethora of opportunities that O.P Jindal Global University had to offer.
